AOS: Ancient Greek Philosophy, especially Plato; Aristotelian ethics and metaphysics, including their later reception (also medieval); the history of the concepts of truth and being.

AOC: Ancient and medieval philosophy, contemporary topics in ethics, metaphysics, philosophy of language, and philosophy of religion.

My main area of historical specialization is ancient Greek philosophy. The initial focus of my research was on the development of Plato's conception of truth. This research project spread out into various related topics in Plato's metaphysics, epistemology, and ethics. The main outcome of this project has been a book on Plato's concept of truth, which also addresses central problems of Platonic metaphysics and epistemology (1996/98). I continue to work on Plato's metaphysics, epistemology, and philosophy of language, and on the Socratic and Platonic approach in ethics.

After completing my book on Plato, I turned to an investigation of the Aristotelian approach in ethics. The outcome of this work has been a book on the Aristotelian and Peripatetic theories of human goods, human well-being, and its natural foundations (published in 2012), in addition to a number of articles that I published on various topics in Aristotelian ethics.

In between, I also published monographs and articles on the role of the concept of friendship in ethics and on the function and meaning of the concept of being as a focal term in metaphysics.

My current English book projects relate to (1) the history of the philosophical concepts of truth and being from Presocratic philosophy to Plato, and (2) the work of the Aristotelian doxographer Arius Didymus as a source on the development of ethical theories in the late Hellenistic Peripatos.

I am also preparing a commentary on Platos' Meno.

Languages:

German, English, Ancient Greek, Latin, French; basic knowledge of Italian and Biblical Hebrew.
